Only 600 characters for comments. Seriously. I have managed to slog my way through about half of the document. The major problem that I see is that the document is so poorly formatted as to be almost unreadable. This is not the first red-lined document I have ever seen. The pagination is screwed up, and there is often no spacing between old words and new words. It appears that some changes were made via change all so you end up with phrases like "board owners" instead of "board members". I suggest that whoever needs to do this go back and make the document readable and resubmit it.
